

Trinity Alumnae Reunion 2022

Class of 1970 Citation

All things seemed possible when the Green Class of 1970 first set foot upon Trinity's stage in the Fall of 1966, a time on the edge of revolution, a class destined to take its place at the apex of decades of change, in the vanguard of the counterculture, a bridge between tradition and transformation.

In your four short student years, you would know the devastating impact of a far away war on friends and families; you would see Washington burning from the rooftop of Kerby Hall and feel the desolation of the assassinations of Martin Luther King, Jr. and Bobby Kennedy. You would dance to the songs of Woodstock and watch in horror as gunshots rang across the green at Kent State.

You would take up the cause of justice on campus and beyond, marching forth on graduation day determined to change this troubled world for the better. You inscribed the words of Siddhartha on the pages of your yearbook: "What is it that you wanted to learn from teachings and teachers, and although they taught you much, what was it that they could not teach you?"

Alma mater asks that question of you again today, gently but firmly, as you celebrate 50 years of life and love and achievement and trials and triumphs. What did you learn in your journeys "out, out in the wide, wide world?"

You are women of great achievement, icons of your chosen professions, proud mothers and leaders of great families, exemplars of Trinity's highest ideals. Today we salute you with the Golden Jubilee Medals. May the love and light of the Trinity be with you on the next phase of your life's journeys.

Congratulations, Class of 1970!
